Part I. Conflict With Greatness

Jewish History

There's a fundamental principle which we should keep in mind whenever we hear krias haTorah, and that is: all of the episodes in the Torah are for each individual to learn from. Hakadosh Baruch Hu dictated these stories to Moshe Rabbeinu so that we should utilize them in our own lives.

Of course, it's of the utmost importance to know Chumash even k'pshuto; without lessons, just to know what happened in our history. Every Jew should have a clear picture of the lives of our Avos and Imahos. Everyone should know about Yosef Hatzaddik; how it happened that he went down to Egypt and because of him we all went down to Egypt subsequently. What happened in Mitzrayim? And Yetzias Mitzrayim, how did it all happen?

And once you know the Chumash, then go ahead and know what happened in the rest of Tanach. I would recommend, if you have no time, at least read the Tanach in English; at least once in your life. You won't understand much, but at least get an idea of what happened in the days of Yehoshua, what happened in the days of the Shoftim. That whole glorious era should be a blank in your mind? What happened in the days of Shaul and Dovid Hamelech and Shlomo Hamelech and all the kings of Malchus Beis Dovid? What happened to the Aseres Hashevatim? There's so much! How could a person live out his life and not know our history? It's part of our great heritage, and therefore, among your achievements in this world should be familiarity with our history.

History Lessons

But there's something much more important than that. The stories of the past, as they're recorded by the Torah, are for the purpose of teaching us how to live successfully in the present. It's a very important lesson and I'll repeat it: Whatever is said that happened in the history of our nation is said also for us to study and learn from there how to make our own history.

Now, even though that's true for everything, but when it comes to the story of Korach and his machlokes against Moshe Rabbeinu, it's even more so — because here the Torah especially sets up Korach as a model. וַיִּהְיוּ לְאוֹת לְבָנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל – You should make a memorial of what Korach did and what happened to him so that it should be a sign for the Am Yisroel..., וְלֹא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח וּכְעֲדֻתוֹ – that they shouldn't be like Korach and his cohorts (Bamidbar 17:3,5). When it comes to this particular episode, Hakadosh Baruch Hu wants us to think about it more than others; we are expected to think about what happened and what could happen, chas v'shalom, to us.

Downfall of a Great Man

Korach, you have to know, was a great man. He went out of Mitzrayim with the Bnei Yisroel. If he wasn't a worthy man, he wouldn't have come out; אֵלֹהֵי הָיָה שָׁם לֹא הָיָה נִגְאָל. Korach also stood at the Yam Suf and he sang Az Yashir with the rest of the nation. He stood at Har Sinai, and he shouted naaseh v'nishma just like everybody else. Korach was a tzaddik, no question about it.

So what happened? He made a big mistake. When a certain evil thought entered Korach's mind — “Why should Moshe Rabbeinu give Aharon Hakohen so much power? We're also in the same shevet!” — he let that quarrelsome thought fester; he began to suspect that he was in the right.

And when he saw that the sons of Aharon died, he was thinking, “Why did such a thing happen that Nadav and Avihu died? I think it's a hint that Hakadosh Baruch Hu is not entirely satisfied to give the kehunah to the sons of Aharon. Only that Moshe Rabbeinu has so much influence with Hakadosh Baruch Hu, so He yielded to him.” Korach suspected that Moshe was at fault. Hakadosh Baruch Hu retzon yereiav ya'aseh, He does what those who fear Him want, and therefore He yielded to Moshe Rabbeinu's choice. But if Moshe wouldn't have pressed the case for Aharon, it wouldn't have happened.

“What's wrong with me?” Korach thought. “And even if not me, there are others.” And he wasn't omed b'nisayon; he confronted Moshe Rabbeinu — he thought it was l'shem Shamayim, of course — and he spoke up against him.

A Torah Warning

What was the end of Korach and those who went along with him? They died in the Midbar. וַתִּפְתַּח הָאֲרֶץ אֶת פִּיהָ – The ground opened its mouth, וַתִּבְלַע אֹתָם – and it swallowed up Korach and his people (ibid. 16:32). Because he opened up a big mouth against Moshe Rabbeinu, so the earth opened up a big mouth on him. And at the conclusion of the story, the Torah tells us, “Be careful! וְלֹא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח וְכַעֲרֹתוֹ!” The Torah goes out of its way to warn us: “Don't make a machlokes with the ‘Moshes,’ with the Torah leaders.”

Because you have to know that Moshe Rabbeinu is not one person; he's considered a model for all the Gedolim in every dor. That's why in the days of the Talmud when somebody said something good, a true pshat, they complimented him, מִשֵּׁה שֶׁפִּיר קְאָמְרֵת – “Moshe, you're talking right” (see Sukkah 39a). They called him “Moshe.” Because the Torah leaders, the talmidei chachomim, the roshei yeshiva, are our Moshes.

Many Moshes

Why is that? Because Hashem wants us to look up to all the Gedolei Yisroel in our generation and obey them. Rav Moshe Feinstein, zichrono livrachah, was our Moshe Rabbeinu. Rav Aharon Kotler zichrono livrachah, he was our Moshe. And every dor has great leaders. Baruch Hashem, even today we have great leaders. Maybe they're not as great as they were a hundred years ago, but they're our leaders. We have roshei yeshiva, zol zein gezunt. We have big *rebbe*s, big tzaddikim. I'm thinking of one right now; he lives not so far away, a very big tzaddik. I won't say his name because others might get jealous. Also, because it's not only him. We have leaders!

Unfortunately, people are not utilizing them. I don't understand why there aren't crowds in Rav Yaakov Kamenetsky's beis hamedrash so much that they're standing on each other's heads. People tell me there is sitting room there! He's the gadol hador, a kindly, soft-spoken person who has knowledge about everything. So why shouldn't everybody go to him? I don't understand why people aren't utilizing the Gedolim, but the minimum, the bare minimum is to respect them, to look up to them. Even though you may not always go to hear them because you're busy, but you must have in your mind the attitude, "I am loyal to the Gedolei haTorah, and I would never think of arguing with them, of causing machlokes."

History Repeats Itself

And the model of Korach was given for that purpose. It's not just telling us stories so we'll have something interesting to listen to in the shul, something interesting for the rabbi to speak about. It's telling us just as then people made a mistake, people are making the same mistake today.

People look at the Torah leaders and they think, "Well, it's true he knows more Torah than me, but what's so great about him? He's a human being like me." You know, some people said that about Moshe Rabbeinu, too. When they saw him walking by, so וְהִבִּיטוּ אֲחֵרֵי מִלְּשָׁה, people looked at him (Shemos 33:8). And the Gemara says that they said, "Look at his thighs, how thick his breeches are" (Shekalim 14b). Moshe was a big, strong man and some people looked at him like a regular person. Of course, they didn't say it. Oh no, they wouldn't have said such a thing. They didn't even think about it. But subconsciously, they thought, "He's a human being and I'm also a human being."

So we see that had we been in the days of Moshe Rabbeinu, it would have been a very difficult nisayon. Because if we would see Moshe Rabbeinu walking in the street, we would see that he is not a skinny fellow; he was a heavyset man – I don't want to say the words about such an ish Elokim, but that's how he was, he was a heavyset man. And as some people looked at him, they saw a person. He didn't have wings, after all, and therefore some people thought about him as an ordinary human being. He looked like an ordinary human being.

Small Brains, Big Mouths

We look back in amazement at them. It's hard even to believe that such a thing ever happened. Moshe Rabbeinu, the greatest man who ever lived, should have opposition? But you see the same thing today. Again and again we see it.

I once heard a rabbi, an American rabbi somewhere in Queens, who was angry at Rav Aharon Kotler, zichrono livrachah. He announced publicly, "If Rabbi Kotler won't change his ways, if he doesn't stop being so extreme, we'll stop making appeals for Lakewood." It's hard to even think about such a thing! Such a chatzuf! A rabbi am ha'aretz – all he did was make English speeches. That's all he could do. I knew him personally. He wasn't a lamdan at all. But he saw a nose! He saw lips! Rav Aharon has a nose like I have a nose. He has lips. I have lips. He has ears like I have ears.

Or another case. I remember there was a writer, a frum Jew who attacked the Satmarer Rebbe. I knew the writer personally, a shomer Shabbos Jew. He once characterized the Satmarer Rebbe in a story, "The Rebbe and the Satan" – a whole story of how the Rebbe made a bris with the Satan to attack Jews. A terrible thing. This man, I don't know how long he'll have to be in Gehenom for that.

All Types of Gedolim

Therefore, don't say, "Well, that story of Korach is only Moshe Rabbeinu. But this Gadol or that Gadol, this rosh yeshiva or another one, who is he compared to Moshe Rabbeinu?" Because Hashem says, "And who are you compared to Korach? Korach was a very great man. You're a nobody, so you surely cannot make machlokes. You're not fit even to open your mouth!"

And I must tell you that I disagree with the attitude of putting down someone else's Gadol. No; I disagree with that attitude. Gedolim can be here and Gedolim can be there, and we have to appreciate all of them. Your Gadol doesn't have to be the only Gadol.

And even though there might be a disagreement between them; yes, there may be a machlokes l'shem Shamayim between them, but we should stay out of it. We shouldn't say a word. We should keep our mouths closed and recognize both sides. That's the way we should follow.

Membership in K'hal Adas Korach

Why did the earth open its big mouth to swallow Korach? Because Korach opened his big mouth. So don't open your mouth! Because even today, the earth opens its mouth to bury men. Many are swallowed in an early grave because they opened their mouths. And what's even worse, many are swallowed into Gehenom just like Korach was. To be swallowed by a cemetery is nothing like the problem of being swallowed by Gehenom.

And therefore, our function is וְלֹא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח וּכְעָרֹתוֹ; we have to follow the Gedolei Yisroel implicitly. Korach, he's our model forever to be careful to avoid machlokes, to not open our mouths against the Torah authorities. Even in your yeshiva, your synagogue, you shouldn't be rebellious against the rav or the rebbe. Even though he doesn't have wings sprouting under his kapote, even though he can't make any mofsim and there is no halo around him, he is the one that Hakadosh Baruch Hu brought to you; he's your Moshe Rabbeinu. So don't make machlokes; don't do anything to weaken his authority. That's what it means, "Don't be like Korach." You're forewarned now; if you get involved, you are being judged by what you would have been in the days of Korach. In the days of Korach, you would have been Adas Korach. Certainly, you would have been there!

Part II. The Conflicts of Life

Korach in the Home

But it's even more than that. Did it occur to you that it also means that you shouldn't look for machlokes with your wife or with your husband? That you shouldn't make machlokes with your neighbors or with your mother-in-law? That if you're busy with machlokes with any Jew, you're transgressing וְכַעֲרָתוֹ וְכִקְרָח וְכִהֵיָה וְכִלֵּא? The Gemara (Sanhedrin 110a) says that, and the Poskim bring that down in sifrei halacha (see Chofetz Chaim, Pesicha, Lav Yud-Beis).

But the question is, how do you learn it from there? That was a national thing, a community thing; Korach wanted to break down Moshe's authority. It's a terrible thing to break down the authority of a Torah leader, a talmid chochom. That we understand; certainly, you shouldn't be choleik on the roshei yeshiva, on the Gedolei Hador, on Torah leaders. The results of such a thing could be terrible for the nation.

But if your neighbor is getting on your nerves because he makes too much noise at night in the backyard — your little children are trying to sleep and he's banging on wood and you want to put him in his place — so that's only a minor thing; an individual story.

No! It's not minor at all. וְלֵא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח means don't be like Korach at all! The issur of machlokes, even among regular people, is learned from וְכַעֲרָתוֹ וְכִקְרָח וְכִהֵיָה וְכִלֵּא and so a Jew who allows himself to be involved in any machlokes sh'lo l'shem Shamayim — which most machlokes are — he should know that he's another Korach. And he's oiver on that lav! וְלֵא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח! You shouldn't make machlokes! And if you're fighting with even one person, it's the same as if you're fighting with many people, even great people.

Arguing With Your Pilegsh

I'll explain that. The Gemara says, לְעוֹלָם אֵל יִטִּיל אָדָם אִימָה יְתֵרָה בְּתוֹךְ בֵּיתוֹ — a man should never make his wife too afraid of him; he shouldn't make arguments in his home, שְׁוֵהֵי פִילְגֶשׁ בְּגִבְעָה — because it once happened a story, הַטִּיל עָלֶיהָ בְּעֵלָהּ אִימָה יְתֵרָה — that a person made a machlokes in his home and, because of that, thousands of Jews were killed (Gittin 6b; see Shoftim 19-21).

What's the story? There was a man who was angry at his pilegesh. He found in the soup that she prepared for him a fly or a hair. It was no great tragedy, it's just soup, but he made it into a big deal. He started complaining and shouting, and she was afraid of him — she knew him — and so she ran out of the house.

So, instead of immediately apologizing and trying to appease her, he closed the door. He locked her out. And that night, while she was on the street, she ended up falling into the hands of wicked people. And in the morning, she was found dead on the doorsteps.

Now, he was a quarrelsome fellow, and now his anger was against the people of the town. So he immediately said the town should make a meeting and discover who did it and punish him immediately. But the town wasn't in a hurry to do it, not as fast as he wanted.

So, what did he do? He cut up the body into twelve pieces and he sent a piece to the Sanhedrin of every shevet. The Sanhedrin of every shevet was sitting in judgment on regular, daily affairs when a man delivered a basket, with a message. They opened up the basket and saw a horrible sight.

Operation Epic Fury

And they became so outraged that they said, “Who did this?! We have to immediately go to war against Shevet Binyamin!” In the old days, the Jews didn't suffer injustice like that and keep quiet about it. And so, they made a big army and they marched on Shevet Binyamin. They said, “Immediately! We want to punish the whole town for that. We won't allow such things in Eretz Yisroel.”

But Binyamin said, “Hold up a minute! The whole town?! This has to be discussed. Take your time.”

“Nothing doing! We won't take our time!”

And there was a war, and many tens of thousands were killed.

Now pay attention to the Gemara. The Gemara says that we see from this story that you shouldn't be an argumentative person in your home because look what happened then, that tens of thousands of Jews died because of machlokes.

Blamed for Bad Potential

So the question is, what kind of comparison is that? Here's a man, a meshugene, who makes his wife tremble. Today I heard a story like that, a man shouting in his house. And she's trembling from him. But he's not causing a war! Even the neighbors don't know what's going on. And therefore, how could you say that because this man is fighting with his wife, it is as if he made a war that kills tens of thousands of people?

And the answer is yes! It just so happens that this man doesn't have the power to do it. There's no longer a Sanhedrin. And his wife is a sane woman; she's a smart woman and lets it pass. So nothing especially bad happens. But Chazal want us to know that even though it never happened to him, he is judged by what could have happened. Because it's the underlying middos – that's what you're judged for.

And so if a man makes fights, he's judged as if he were a very powerful person; the fact that you don't have the power, that's not going to save you. You don't get any credit for not having any power. You're judged as if you had the power and with your anger not only you frightened your wife to death but you caused many tens of thousands of people to perish.

And so every little machlokes is actually tremendous because it's the middos – arrogance, jealousy, anger, other things too – that ignite machlokes, and those middos would play out even more if you had more power. That's why these things are written; in order to teach us how to behave in our private lives. We are judged individually by what could have happened on a national scale.

The World on Fire

And so when people today fight among themselves, in the synagogue, in the office, in the home, it's the exact same as לֹא יִהְיֶה בְּקִרְחָ וּבְעִרְתּוֹ. Isn't it a tragedy that people hear the Chumash read and they don't know that it's talking to them? They think, וַיִּקַּח קִרְחַ – there was a man, Korach, way back who did this foolish thing, and that's all. Oh no! Our lives are just as important to us as the life of Korach was in his time.

And it's going on in every synagogue, in every yeshiva; lehavdil, every business. Mothers-in-law are trying to fight with their daughters-in-law and vice versa. The world is a hubbub! It's boiling; ess kocht zich. The world is a pot on the fire. It's cooking with machlokes in families, among neighbors. I've been a misparallel all my life in shuls and a Rav in about seven, eight kehillos, and I've seen machlokes all the time. That's one of the most outstanding features of a kehilla – just like tefillah b'tzibbur and krias haTorah, also machlokes, constantly.

You innocent young people, you don't know. I know. My telephone is ringing all day long. Fights! With everybody. People tell me that neighbors are ruining their lives l'hachis. All kinds of spiteful things. Of course, among the gentiles it's a thousand times worse. When a goy makes machlokes, he pulls out his stiletto, his knife. Among Jews, although it doesn't go so far usually, but like it says in Mishlei, words are worse than swords. וְהֵם יָרְדוּ חֲרָי בֶטֶן – Words go down into the chambers of the belly (18:8). People get sick from machlokes. There are stories upon stories; people who became diabetic because of machlokes. Heart failure, too. They died in the middle of an argument with their wives. All over the world people lose their jobs. They lose customers, too.

Slow Down: Trouble Ahead

And therefore, the model of Korach, the story in this week's sedrah, means watch out for machlokes. It means you shouldn't open your mouth against anybody – except against reshaim gemurim. Sometimes you must, l'shem Shamayim, but otherwise no. You have to be very careful when you open up your mouth.

That's what Shlomo says, אַל תִּצֵּא לָרֵב מִהָרָה – Don't hurry to go out into a quarrel (Mishlei 25:8). Because once you start, פֶּן מָה תִּעָשֶׂה בְּאַחֲרֵיתָהּ – you don't know what's going to be the result (ibid.). Who knows what could happen? Later you'll be sorry.

Now, it means two things. First, in gashmiyus, it means that ultimately you'll get trouble from that fight. You'll say angry words, the other party will answer angry words, and who knows what will happen? How many people ended up separating only because they started out with the wrong words? Separating from friends, from neighbors, from brothers. How many got sick from machlokes? How many lost parnassah? Had they kept their mouths closed, nothing would have happened. That's Shlomo's warning: "Don't hurry into a fight because you don't know what trouble you'll have as a result."

The Real Result

But listen now to what Shlomo really meant. פֶּן מָה תַעֲשֶׂה בְּאַחֲרִיתָהּ – What will you do when the quarrel turns against you and causes you trouble at the end, after you leave this world? It's like I told you once, in Mishlei there is a peel of the fruit and there's a fruit itself. The peel of the fruit is also delicious; our grandmothers used to take the orange peels and never throw them away. They candied them. But that's not the main purpose of the orange. The inside is more important. So even though פֶּן מָה תַעֲשֶׂה בְּאַחֲרִיתָהּ also means in this world – you'll lose friends, you'll lose your job, you'll lose prestige, you'll lose your health – but there's much worse than that. The fact that machlokes results in trouble for you in this world is only a maschal. Because whatever trouble you have in this world is nothing compared to the trouble that's going to be in the World to Come.

Because machlokes means all kinds of aveiros. Of course, number one is “Don't be like Korach,” but there's much more. There's the big sin, וְלֹא תוֹנוּ אִישׁ אֶת עַמִּיתוֹ – you shouldn't hurt your fellow man's feelings (Vayikra 25:17). For getting angry, there are all types of punishments. כָּל הַבּוֹעֵס בְּלִמְיֵי גִיהֶנֶם שׁוֹלְטִין בוֹ – Someone who gets angry, all the different kinds of Gehenom will have control over him (Nedarim 22b). There's lashon hara, there's sinah, other aveiros you never even imagined. And in the Next World, you'll be faced with a din v'cheshbon and you'll find out then – it'll be too late – that there's a very big Gehenom for machlokes.

Imagining Korach

And so it's a good thing to think about that. Sometimes a person is in the mood to start a quarrel, let's say in the beis haknesses, or he wants to make a machlokes on somebody, so he should remind himself that a man who opens up his mouth to swallow somebody up in machlokes, there is a mouth waiting for him, too.

Here's a man; he's walking home from the synagogue and he sees a deep ditch. The gas workers, let's say, are digging a deep hole so that they can lay a new pipe. So as he passes by, he thinks, “Maybe I should stop right now! Because how would it feel if a man was put in that ditch and the bulldozer pushed all the dirt on top of him and covered him alive? It's no fun!”

But suppose the ditch is very deep – it’s deep and deep and deep – and you know it’s a one way trip; then it’s no fun at all! And so, אַל תִּצַא לָרֶב, פֶּן מָה תַעֲשֶׂה בְּאַחֲרֵיתָהּ, מָהָר – Don’t hurry to go out into a quarrel, because that’s going to be the result.

Part III. Ending Conflict

The Peace Maker

Now, if we’re speaking about the subject of machlokes, we have to complete the picture by speaking also about shalom, the great middah of peace. You have to know that shalom, Hakadosh Baruch Hu says, “That’s My Name” (see Shabbos 10b). That’s why you can’t say “Shalom aleichem” in the beis hakisei, because you’re using Hashem’s Name.

Now, why did He call Himself Shalom? Because He’s the עוֹשֶׂה שְׁלוֹם, the אֲדוֹן לְכָל הַשְּׁלוֹם. He made the entire world one big machine whose parts work together. The sun, for example, is not a single phenomenon; the sun’s energy supplies all the movement, all the action, all the changes that take place on this earth.

And the winds are an essential part of the system. If not for the winds, we would have no food. They blow the carbon dioxide past the plants which suck the carbon dioxide out of the air and create starches. And the soil cooperates with the winds and the sun. The clouds and the rain also cooperate. The seas cooperate with the continents because the seas control the climate. The drain of the water from the continents flows off into the seas. Then, it’s evaporated into the sky, and transported again to the continents by the winds and the rainfall from the water in the clouds; so the sea and the continents are one. And it’s all Hashem; Hashem is the Oseh Shalom.

The Peace Seeker

And that’s how Hakadosh Baruch Hu wants us to live, in a way of shalom, a peaceful coexistence of cooperation. And Dovid Hamelech tells us that it’s so important that you shouldn’t wait for it to come to you. בְּקֶשׁ שְׁלוֹם וְרִפְּהוּ – You should seek out peace (Tehillim 34:15); make it a principle in life to seek peace with everyone. Like somebody once said, “If you have a thousand friends, you don’t have one friend to spare.” You hear that chochma? It means, get busy making friends.

How? So the world says a drop of honey can catch more flies than a gallon of vinegar. You want to catch friends? Be honey, not vinegar. Smile, be polite, be friendly, give in to other people, speak softly, overlook their foibles and faults. Get along with everybody. It doesn't mean you have to associate with the lower elements but you can make it your business to always be on friendly terms with everybody.

It's one of the common sense principles of life, to seek shalom. And it's avodas Hashem, too. Get along with your father; get along with your mother; get along with your brothers and sisters — הַפֶּה מִזֶּה טוֹב וּמִזֶּה נְעִים (ibid. 133:1). Train yourself to be friendly to the people of your family. To neighbors, too. A neighbor has to seek peace. I had a neighbor like that. My little boy broke a neighbor's basement window. Did he come running out to make a fuss? No. Instead of being rodef me, he was rodef shalom. He didn't say a word. A very sensible neighbor. We have to live together for many years so he keeps quiet. That's what neighbors are.

Suspicious Behavior

If there's a quarrel, even if the other party is wrong — by the way, it's probably not so. You have to suspect that maybe you're wrong. The truth is in many cases you'll discover that you are wrong. I speak to people all the time. How many times do people state their side of the story without even suspecting that the other party could be right too? Why are you right? Maybe the other person is right. He's not entirely right? Maybe he's a certain percentage right.

But once you're in a quarrel, your mind is working overtime; even when you're eating or you're going about your business, your mind is working with arguments to justify yourself and to prove that the other fellow is wrong. Check sometimes after an argument and you'll see how your mind is working; busy, busy, busy.

And you're quite a good lawyer for yourself. After a few weeks, you're convinced you're a tzaddik and the other fellow is a rasha. And so you repeat it to your relatives, and each time you tell it, you put in more relish on it to make yourself more righteous and the other person more wrong, and after a few weeks of retelling it, it's a beautiful story. You're shining like an angel! And your daughter-in-law or your mother-in-law is like a villain, a devil.

Wicked Self–Persuasion

But it could be just the opposite. That's what happened to Korach. He deceived himself into believing that Moshe Rabbeinu was wrong. And he kept on talking to himself and persuading himself until he was so blind that he couldn't see the truth. And that's what everybody else does. Everybody is a Korach, more or less; the difference is that Korach is given to us as an example. וְלֹא יִהְיֶה כְּקֹרַח – Don't be like Korach! Don't go to machlokes just because you deceive yourself and don't realize how wrong you are!

And therefore, never trust yourself! That's the cleansing wind that blows through the whole panorama of Torah living. Be chosheid yourself. These are the great words that we were taught when we were in Slabodka. Suspect yourself! Because the oimek hadin is going to hold us responsible. We're answerable for such errors, and therefore the best advice is to overlook things; whatever it is, try to make up with everyone. If he comes to you and asks for mechilah, very good. If he doesn't, try to get close to him anyhow and make shalom.

The Life Lubricant

That's what it means רָדַפְתָּ. What does it mean to “run after”? When it's not easy. Don't say, “Shalom will come to me.” Run after it. Pursue it. Sometimes there's a quarrel and a woman after the quarrel brings her husband a tidbit to eat, a piece of cake or something else. Very good! He may not take it – he's stubborn – but it's already the beginning of making shalom. She's lubricating life; they'll get along again.

That's an important point: the lubrication of life. You know if you look in the body where bones rub against each other, like your shoulder. This bone is rubbing against the shoulder bone back and forth. It could cause friction. What did Hakadosh Baruch Hu do? He put between the bones a gelatin, a sticky material so the bones never touch each other. As the bones rotate close to each other, this gelatin separates them.

So, baruch Hashem, all our bones are lubricated so as not to rub each other. Sometimes a person gets sick, chalilah, and this gelatin material disappears. Then the bones start rubbing – an abrasion – and it hurts terribly. He has to go to the Hospital for Joint Diseases in Manhattan. And so you see, lubrication is a very big principle in the body. The Oseh

Shalom does that for you. Your life is much more happy because of that lubrication.

The Peace Process

And therefore, that's something we have to do always; we have to find ways and means of lubricating between ourselves. There's no need to make unnecessary abrasions, that you should rub against each other and cause friction and cause trouble. Make up your mind, "I'm going to lubricate it."

Here's a mechutan who's walking with his wife in the street. From a distance, he sees you coming, and he pulls his wife into a store right away so he shouldn't have to meet you. He runs away from you.

What do you do? On Purim, you go and bring him shalach manos personally. You're trying. "Maybe I can be mefayes him." They take the shalach manos; he doesn't even say thank you. He talks against you all the time in his house. Meshugene! But you do it again next year. You look for ways of being rodef shalom.

It doesn't mean you have to be a milquetoast, a pushover. But you can always do things delicately. I remember once a mechutan who went to the wedding and there was a mechitzah. He didn't want it; in the middle of the chasunah he was making a huge fuss, "I don't want a mechitzah!" Now, you can't take down a mechitzah — there are yeshiva people around. But you have to deal with people with silk gloves. You don't take down the mechitzah, but you don't give him a smack either. You're itching maybe to give him a wallop. No; you have to be patient. Be patient and be quiet.

Ignore and Smile

Oh yes, keep quiet! That's the best lubricant! Because פוֹטֵר מִיָּמִים רְאִשִׁית פּוֹטֵר מִיָּמִים רְאִשִׁית - when a person opens up the water sluice and lets the water start coming out, that's the beginning of the quarrel (Mishlei 17:14). So don't respond. Mend the breach as soon as possible!

A very important lesson. If there's something developing, an argument, close your mouth! If it has to be open, see that you get a monkey wrench to force your mouth open. And even if you have to bite your lips and check yourself, it's always better, it's always less costly than opening your mouth and expressing your anger, because it can end up in who knows what. אֶשְׁמְרָהּ לְפִי מִחֶסֶם – I'll put a muzzle on my mouth (Tehillim 39:2). And the more your mouth is muzzled, the luckier you are.

Ignoring and Apologizing

I know a man whose wife is always scolding and belittling him. He bends his head and accepts it. He doesn't say anything back. He's a rodef shalom. That's lubrication. Keep quiet. טוֹבִיָּה – How fortunate is a man, רִשְׁמַע – who hears, וְאֶרֶיֶשׁ – and pays no attention. הַלְפֹּהָ בִישָׁתִּיָּהּ – A hundred evils pass him by (Sanhedrin 7a). So anybody who says something you don't like, pay no attention. You didn't hear it. Unless your rebbe is criticizing you; that you should take in. Otherwise, pay no attention. If your husband is mean to you, pay no attention. Your wife is mean to you, pay no attention. A hundred evils will pass you by and you'll live together happily for the rest of your life.

Here's a man who says to his wife, "I won't give you any more money. You waste it." You can't say that. You're mechuyav to give your wife money. And therefore, he's breaking the shalom. But what does she say? Nothing. She keeps quiet. She knows that soon, next week, he will give her the money. It's only talk. Of course, he should put on some lubrication as quickly as possible. He has to apologize. Sometimes you might be bashful, so write a little note; say, "I'm sorry," and hand the note to your wife on paper. It's better than nothing.

Lubricating Life in Both Worlds

And so they both did a wise thing. They're not perfect, they're human, but they lubricated their life together and they'll live more happily because of that. מִי הָאִישׁ הַהֶפְצֵךְ חַיִּים – You want to live a long and happy life? אֵהָב יָמִים לְרֵאוֹת טוֹב – You want to see good days? So בִּקֶּשׁ שְׁלוֹם – look for shalom (Tehillim 34:13,15).

And not only good days in this world. If you're a rodef shalom, you're doing what Hakadosh Baruch Hu wants and you're a customer for Olam Haba. Hakadosh Baruch Hu says, "Bakeish shalom – that's a good way to prepare for Olam Haba. Because I want you to be together with My people, and 'people' means every one of My people." And so each time you pursue shalom, you're getting a tikkun, a preparation for Olam Haba.

That's a very important point you're hearing right now, because the whole Torah emphasizes that: וְכָל נְתִיבוֹתֶיהָ שְׁלוֹם – All the paths of the Torah lead to shalom (Mishlei 3:17). Of course, shalom means shleimus also – perfection. But, k'pshuto, it means to be at peace with people. Because the Torah is intended for the purpose of making shalom between Jews, between the Am Hashem. And that shalom, because it's a shleimus of character, is going to translate into successful living in Olam Hazei and also into the happiness of Olam Haba.

Let's Get Practical

Run For Your Life

In this week's parsha, the Torah gives us a model for the ages of what can happen when a person – even a great person – becomes embroiled in machlokes.

This week, bli neder, at least once a day in the bracha of Sim Shalom, I will have in mind that Hakadosh Baruch Hu should help His people be unified in our loyalty to Torah leaders. And if, chas v'shalom, there is anyone whatsoever with whom I am lacking in shalom, I will go out of my way to try to make amends with that person.

Dress To Impress

"And you shall bathe and anoint yourself and put on your garments" (Rus 3:3) Said R' Elazar: These are the garments of Shabbos. (Shabbos 113b) As we know, there is a special halachah of wearing Shabbos clothes.

The idea of changing into Shabbos clothes is learned from the bigdei kehunah as the Gemara (Shabbos 114a) states: "What is the source in the Torah for changing one's garments? It is written (Vayikra 6:4), "And he [the Kohen] shall remove his garments and wear different garments" From here we see that Shabbos clothes are like the bigdei kehunah. Just as the Kohanim in the Beis HaMikdash had special garments, on Shabbos we have special garments.

A person's clothing expresses who he is. The bigdei kehunah are actually the garments of the angels. The angel Gavriel is called, "The man clothed in linen," (Daniel 12:7) and the garments of the Kohanim are made primarily of linen. When the Kohanim enter the Beis HaMikdash, they are as devoted to serving Hashem as are the angels in Heaven. Thus they wear the garments of angels.

As a child in Williamsburg, Brooklyn, we had a neighbor who had a very menial job. I would see him walking around all week in his soiled work clothes. But when Shabbos came, he donned a splendid shtreimel and a bekishev with a lovely floral design; with his long beard, you could think he was a Rebbe. I didn't even recognize him! On Shabbos, we all wear special and different clothing because then we are different, more elevated people. We are as dedicated to holiness and purity as the Kohanim in the Beis HaMikdash.

Now let's discuss Shabbos clothing. Imagine you're in a hotel on the other side of the world, spending Shabbos by yourself. You've packed everything you need. Will you put on your Shabbos clothes, or will you wear old, faded clothing? There is no question that all of us would wear the same special clothes we wear every Shabbos. Why? For whom are we dressing up? And we wouldn't stop there. We'd put a white tablecloth on the table, and even flowers, if possible. For whom are we doing all this?

The answer is obvious: On Shabbos, we meet Hashem. When we meet someone, we want to look respectable. That's how we develop positive relationships. So wherever we may be, we put on Shabbos clothes for Hashem. We're saying, "Hashem, I'm dressing up in Your honor!" We take out our best clothing and make ourselves look nice in order to make a good impression on Hashem, so to speak. We want to express how much we love and venerate Him, so we dress up when He comes!

QUESTION

Should a husband and wife separate in order for her to go to the country in the summer and relax?

ANSWER

In general, a husband and wife should never separate. That's the purpose of having a wife and having a husband: וְהָיוּ לְבָשָׂר אֶחָד - And they will become one flesh (Bereishis 2:24). You don't separate from your hands or from your feet. You have to realize that it's one personality. It's not just a team, it's a personality. They must always be together.

Now, it doesn't mean that when he goes to the synagogue that she has to be in the background. Or that when she's going, let's say, to the sewing club, that he should hang around and look on, no. Each has his or her separate interests, but in general, they're together.

Now, sometimes, he has to go away on a trip for work. He can't take her along; it can't be helped. Or she has to go for a certain purpose that the husband cannot go along; he has to remain here because of his business. That's something else. But just to go off on a pleasure trip somewhere without her husband, to separate, that's not to be recommended at all. It's against the principles on which marriage is founded.

QUESTION

What do you say about this bungalow-style vacation where the wife sees her husband only on Shabbos?

ANSWER

And the answer is, if it's a benefit for the children then it's proper. Because עֵקְלוֹנוּ אֵלּוּ הַבְּנִיּוֹת - all of our work is our children. If the children in the bungalow can have a better environment than in the city, if they can have a very good rebbe, and very good chaveirim or chaveiros, then it's worth it.

The only criterion is how much ruchniyus will the children gain. And on that basis, this kind of arrangement is justified.
